

Greetings from the Mayor of San Francisco

On behalf of the City and County of San Francisco, it gives me great pleasure to welcome the organizers, sponsors and attendees to the 17th Annual CardTechSecurTech 2007 Conference and Exhibition held at Moscone Center West, May 15-17, 2007. I am also delighted that our great city has been chosen to play host to this very important event for the second consecutive year.

San Francisco takes great pride in being a city on the cutting edge of innovation and technology. I am pleased that CardTechSecurTech is bringing together the best and the brightest minds to exchange dialogue and help create real solutions to real world problems. This conference represents the country's largest exhibition of advance card, biometric and access security solutions. With the current issue of personal and business security having such an affect on our daily lives, this is a very critical and timely conference.

While visiting San Francisco I hope that you will take the time to enjoy all the great sights and entertainment venues our city has to offer. From our world-class restaurants and nightclubs, to the Golden Gate Bridge and the captivating views from the scenic city hills, to our diverse and multicultural communities- you're in for a treat not just for your senses, but also for your soul!

Again welcome to San Francisco and I wish you a most successful and productive event.

Warmest Personal Regards,
